

RUSSIA WILL DISCUSS PEACE

This Is The Official Statement Given Out In Washington This Morning.

ST. PETERSBURG NOT CONTENTED

War Party Seeks To Continue The Struggle In The Far East, Even Though Nation Itself Wants Peace.

[SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-M'RAE]

St. Petersburg, June 12.—It is stated on good authority that Russia will not agree to abandoning Vladivostok and if Japan insists on dismantling this fortress the war must continue. The attitude today of the reactionary press shows a strong party in St. Petersburg is working against peace. Articles are published attacking Roosevelt and asserting he is openly hostile to Russia. The report from Manchuria that the Japanese had begun an offensive movement also had a tendency to make the outlook for peace less bright.

See Cruiser

Singapore, June 12.—The steamer Seaton arrived today and reports that on June tenth it passed a Russian volunteer cruiser in the Malacca Straits. The cruiser was on its way back home.

Goes for Conference

St. Petersburg, June 12.—It is announced today M. Witte, President of the Committee of Ministers, is leaving St. Petersburg for abroad in two on "public business." It is said on good authority the mission is connected with peace negotiations.

No Statements

Washington, June 12.—It is intimated at the White House this morning that no further official statements will be issued regarding the peace negotiations until the Japanese reply to the President's note is received at St. Petersburg and the Russian reply has been received at Tokyo. It is expected a notice of the receipt of these answers by the two governments will be sent by Ambassador Meyer and Minister Grisco.

Russian Ambassador

Count Cassini called on the President this morning. He brought with him, important instruction from his government, including, it is suspected, a formal answer to Roosevelt's note.

Formally Assented

It is officially announced, Russia has formally assented to the proposition to appoint plenipotentiaries and the time and place of meeting is now being considered. The call of the Russian ambassador was made shortly after eleven o'clock. Contrary to the usual custom he presented himself at the main part of the house instead of at the President's office in the west wing. This fact indicates the importance of the interview. Although Ambassador Meyer has already transmitted the substance of Russia's reply the official notification to President Roosevelt's note was not made until Cassini brought it in person. The announcement of the names of the plenipotentiaries is expected within a day or two.

Has Started

St. Petersburg, June 12.—The reply of the Russian government to Roosevelt's note proposing a peace conference has been handed to Ambassador Meyer and is now on its way to Washington. Following a receipt of the reply Meyer had a conference with Foreign Minister Lansdorf.

Japan Fears Armistice

Tokyo, June 12.—The Japanese still continue to maintain an attitude of reserve toward the question of peace. There were demonstrations in the streets of the capital late Saturday evening, and Sunday students organized a celebration, but a rainstorm speedily cleared the streets.

It seemed to be the popular fear that Japan will sacrifice the advantage of Admiral Togo's victory, as well as Field Marshal Oyama's opportunities, by consenting to an armistice now. It is felt that Togo's victory opens up the entire Russian Pacific coast to invasion, and that Oyama is capable of speedily taking Harbin, cutting the railway and isolating Vladivostok. It is also feared that the Russians will take advantage of an armistice to improve their positions and strengthen their forces.

There is a general demand that Japan carefully safeguard its interests if an armistice is declared.

Awaits Russia's Reply.
No information concerning Russia's formal answer to President Roosevelt's proposal has been received here, and the government preserved an attitude of silence.

The absence of assurance that Russia will accept President Roosevelt's proposal, and the knowledge that the final consummation of peace involves the adjustment of a series of questions of paramount importance, extending over weeks of negotiation, coupled perhaps with the recollection of a previous experience in the thorny path of the world's politics, seem to create a disposition to await final results.

There is, nevertheless, the keenest satisfaction over the preliminary step and a feeling of deep gratefulness over President Roosevelt's action. There is also genuine thanksgiving at the thought that the carnage and horror and waste of war will soon end and a genuine hope that the negotiations will bring a satisfactory and enduring peace.

Japanese Censor Is Busy

President Roosevelt's instructions to American Minister Grisco were delayed in transmission and did not reach the legation until late Saturday afternoon. The censor refused to allow the transmission of press telegrams bearing on the subject.

All information was withheld from the public until 6 o'clock Saturday night, when the foreign office issued a statement containing President Roosevelt's letter and Foreign Minister Komura's response, and newboys were quickly on the streets of the capital with extra editions of the newspapers.

The Japanese plenipotentiaries to arrange terms of peace are already being discussed. The names of Marquis Ito, Premier Katsura, Foreign Minister Komura, Marquis Yamagata and others are being suggested for possible heads of the commission.

Money and Territory.
Popular estimates of Japan's terms of peace vary widely and include both indemnity and cession of territory. It is believed that the peace commissioners will meet somewhere in the Orient.

The Jiji says: "Japan has shown a willingness to appoint plenipotentiaries to meet the Russians and negotiate peace; but it is premature to think this will lead to the ultimate conclusion of peace. Much as Japan would like to see peace effected, nothing short of the full rights of victory and placing the peace of the Orient on a permanent basis will satisfy Japan. It is premature to discuss terms of peace. It probably will become necessary to arrange an armistice at the commencement of negotiations, and it will be essential to obtain some guarantee before concluding an armistice in order to prevent the interests and position of Japan from suffering in the event of negotiations being broken off."

Praise for Roosevelt's Act.
"The great and unprecedented Japanese victory must not be forgotten. Russia's great power is not easily broken down. It might require years before ultimate result of the war is attained. Japan does not fear the prolongation of the war, but the heavy loss of lives involved move the people from the depths of their hearts."

The Jiji thanks President Roosevelt and pays tribute to him for his action. It concludes by warning the people to be prepared for the non-success of the negotiations, and for the possible necessity of continuing the struggle.

The Nichi Nichi writes in the same strain, warning the people not to count on peace while the war party in Russia continues to exert its influence over the Emperor. It urges Japan to insist on some guarantee so as to secure its protection if an armistice should be declared. Japan's terms may not be exacting, the paper says, but the fact of her unequalled victory must not be forgotten. The Nichi Nichi concludes by saying that "the situation requires calmness and watchfulness."

Later a fourth destroyer was discovered and "sunk." Then the Texas made a frontal demonstration on the fort aided by a swift cruiser. ## SULTAN IN USUAL DESULTORY MOOD

Turkey's Ruler Treats Immethodically
the Protests of Servian Government.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Constantinople, June 12.—The sultan is treating with his usual desultory manner the protests of Servia in connection with the recent violation of the Servian Consulate at Monastir, Macedonia. Today brings a crisis in the matter, for Servia has notified the Porte that unless satisfaction is granted, she will recall her minister from Constantinople. It appears that the local police searched the consulate and seized certain papers. It has been announced that the furnace companies will not deal with the miners' union at all and will not even receive a committee from the organization, and this matter will be discussed at the convention. There has been a strike since July 1, 1904, and the furnace companies, with one exception, have steadfastly refused to treat with the union miners. The companies are claiming that their production is picking up and the non-union men are becoming more and more adept at mining.

Washington, June 12.—The navy department today began the examination of candidates for twenty-nine vacancies in the grade of assistant paymaster, the only grade of the pay corps to which appointments are made from "civil" life. For the first time it was not necessary to exert political influence to obtain designations for this examination. By order of Secretary Morton all applicants who presented satisfactory letters from reputable business concerns were admitted to the test. The examinations are being held at the navy yard here and at the navy yard, Mare Island, Cal., that the applicants from the Pacific coast may also have the opportunity to take it.

VERY PICTURESQUE FESTIVAL IS BEGUN

School in England.

The festival will consist of a series of tableaux and a genuine folk play representing in action, with dialogue, music and procession, episodes out of the varied history of Sherborne, from the coming of Aldhelm to the reign of Elizabeth. It will interest Americans to know that the final tableau will represent the founding of Sherborne, Mass., by a native of the English town in 1820. Over 700 people will take part in the festival.

BETTER TIME THAN WAS SCHEDULED FOR

Pennsylvania Train Is Three Minutes Ahead of the Scheduled Arrival.

[SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-M'RAE.]

Much of the distance was done in less than a mile a minute.

Arrive in Chicago
Chicago, Ill., June 12.—The west-bound Pennsylvania special, the new eighteen-hour train which left New York at 3:55 yesterday afternoon, arrived in Chicago at 8:52 this morning, three minutes ahead of the running time, with no accidents.

Engineer Cates, who brought the flyer into Chicago, declared he could cut the time by thirty minutes.

Big result for the money: a want ad.

RIVERS RISE; LIVES ARE LOST

Mississippi River Comes Up Above The Danger Mark, And Many Lose Their Lives.

FIND WEAK SPOTS IN THE LEVEES

Water Continues To Come--Danger Signals Are Sent Along The Whole Course Of The River To Protect Property Owners.

[SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-M'RAE.]

Hannibal, Mo., June 12.—The stage of the river was seventeen feet six inches at seven this morning and is still rising at the rate of a half inch an hour. At Quincy it is eighteen feet and four inches and still rising, which indicates the crest will not be reached before tomorrow. A large force worked all night to prevent a break in the levee in the southern part of the city. The people of this section are rapidly moving their effects.

Davenport, Ia., June 12.—Rivers affected by the cloudburst of Saturday are gradually subsiding and the loss is not so great as was first anticipated, although the railroads of the state suffer a great loss the property losses are estimated at a million and a quarter dollars. No lives were lost.

From Keokuk comes word that Riley, Smallwood, 75 years old, was drowned in a flood that covered 20,000 acres of farm land in Missouri. Seven persons living near Alexandria are unaccounted for after fleeing from the advancing deluge. The loss of crops in Clark county alone is estimated at a million dollars, and the railroads entering Keokuk are said to have lost as much more.

Ruins Railroad Tracks.

The Wabash is the only line at Keokuk that escaped damage. The flood which raised the waters of the Mississippi eight and a half feet in six hours swept away three miles of the Burlington track. The Rock Island bridges are said to be gone as far west as Eldon, Iowa.

Alarming reports come from Major M. Meigs, government engineer, who made a trip to the Lima Lake levee on the Illinois side of the river. He says water already is seeking through the levee, and although hundreds of men are working day and night to strengthen the weak places, the fissures are large enough to permit the passage of good-sized fish.

If the forecast of Weather Observer Goswisch, in charge of flood conditions on the upper Mississippi, that another big rise may be looked for today prove correct, untold damage will be inflicted on crops and property. Farmers in the lowlands are fleeing for their lives, taking as much with them as possible.

STATE NOTES

As a result of drinking half a cupful of kerosene the 14-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hammond of Little Chute is dead.

Frank Cramer of Marinette fell from a freight train in the village of Bear Creek, Ontonagon county, and his body was literally cut to pieces.

R. O. Hunt will probably carry his land case contest, in which he was defeated in a state court by the Peshigo company, into the United States supreme court.

The breaking of the big generator of the Kenosha Electric Railway company Saturday morning completely crippled the service, and no cars were run until the afternoon.

A 10-year-old son of William Rose of Granton, Clark county, is dead from diphtheria. The child was treated by Christian Science and all medicine refused. The family is now in quarantine.

After prophesying that some day Peter B. Nelson, mayor of Racine, would become governor of Wisconsin, the convention of the United Danish Societies of America ended its convention in Racine.

Despite the storm 1,220 people attended the picnic of the old settlers of Crawford county and Kickapoo valley at Gay Mills on Saturday. The Rev. R. E. Condon of Reedsburg gave the principal address and hundreds of his old parishioners were present.

In the circuit court at Cross Valley, Cal., Mrs. H. E. Reber of Kenosha has brought a suit for absolute divorce from her husband, a well-known Kenosha plumber. Reber is wealthy, and it is claimed that he has consented not to appear in the case and to make a reasonable provision for the support of his wife.

As the result of the shipment of an express package from Appleton, the consignee at Minneapolis has been arrested and will be brought to Green Bay to answer the charge of stealing the pieces of silk, valued at about $300, from the store of Ald. Gray. After the Gray robbery was discovered it was learned that the same trick was tried in a number of other stores in that city.

A Sore Throat.

Should never be neglected, especially in the time of epidemics. A cleansing gargle is made by dissolving a heaped spoonful of salt and carbonate of soda, mixed in equal quantities, in half a tumblerful of water.

lighthouse tender Lily had a nerve-racking experience when the boat was caught in a vortex and was nearly sucked to the bottom of the river. He saved the lives of his wife and daughter and the crew with a bawler, which required the combined efforts of a dozen men to fasten it.

J. S. Rebe, an observer of floods for forty years, said: "With the Des Moines pouring over the levees above the town—levees that two days ago towered like high walls above the waters—and with the Mississippi backing into the lower portion of the town, and as far as the eye can see a vast expanse of water, I believe the loss to the farmers alone in this vicinity will reach a million dollars."

At Quincy, Ill., the river is five to eight miles wide. Water is seeping through the Indian Grove levee just north of the town, and another twenty-foot rise is anticipated. There is scarcely a hope that the banks will stand the strain. The Sny district is still safe, but a break would bring destruction to thousands of acres of rich crops. Wheat and corn alike will suffer.

Water Is High at Hannibal.

All records for rapid rising of the water in the Mississippi river at Hannibal, Mo., are being broken. Beginning with a stage of 11.3 feet, which was maintained Saturday afternoon, the water passed the danger line of 13 feet during the night, and last night had reached a stage of 17.1 feet, making a rise of almost six feet in twenty-four hours.

Across from Hannibal, Ill., the water is lapping the Sny levee, the mighty barrier which protects the Sny district, embracing 110,000 acres of fertile land. Hannibal ferryboats are landing at the Wabash railroad tracks in Shepherd, Ill.

All the islands in the river in that locality are inundated and the lowlands on either side of the river, which are unprotected by levees, are being laid waste.

The Wisconsin river at Portage, Wis., and Kibbourn is at the highest stage known in many years. A hundred feet of the Milwaukee road has been swept away on the Madison and Portage branch, but the main line is still intact.

ASPHALT AGENTS ON RACK OF INQUIRY

Ira Tinkson in Philadelphia.

Defrauding First National Bank, in Court.

Gates, Frederick Goll and I. B. Bliss.

LOBBY ASSEMBLES AT CAPITOL TODAY

Are Trying to Defeat the Host Division of the Surplus Bill in the Senate.

Madison, Wis., June 12.—Both houses met this afternoon to take up the remnants of business. The biggest insurance lobby ever assembled at Madison has gathered to defeat the Host division of the surplus bill, which comes up in the senate this afternoon for final concurrence. A canvass of the senate indicates that the vote will be a tie with Lieut.-Gov. Davidson favorable. This vote would pass the bill, but the lobby is trying hard to get one more senator, necessary to defeat the measure, which involves some forty millions of dollars, held by Host to be due Wisconsin policy-holders in the mutual life companies.

MANY NOVELTIES FOR THE FOURTH

INNOVATIONS WILL MAKE DAY BRIGHTER THAN EVER.

NO LARGE CANNON CRACKERS

But There Are Numerous Newly Fangled Means of Producing Noise.

"Notwithstanding the new law in Wisconsin, which prohibits the use of big fire crackers, repeating cases, street car torpedoes, and other such noisy devices, there will be a large collection of Fourth of July novelties from which young Americans may choose this year," said a salesman of one of the big jobbing houses in Fourth of July novelties, who recently visited this city. "We of course handle the same as ever, as we crackers in seven or eight supply customers, and Wisconsin is the different states, and where they are only one, by law."

Decorative Novelties in Demand.
"With each succeeding year, I think the American people are getting further away from the smoke, explosion and noise in Fourth of July parties, more and more interested in quiet and beautiful decorative effects. To meet this increasing demand, there are, this year, large supplies of red, white, and blue paper balls of all sizes, paper parasols, prettiest of all, in artistic paper designs, and in the national colors. This has and in the national colors. These come largely from the fashion of the paper balls in red for Christmas, and in white for wedding decorations. Now the Third of July is combined for Uncle Sam's birthday."

Novelty Also Imported.
A novelty also has been imported from Germany, consisting of a beautiful bright colored paper globe for daylight decoration. Brilliant colors, yellow, white, scarlet, green and blue predominate, and these can be artistically blended. There is also the Uncle Sam hat in red, white and blue paper, and in various sizes.

Canes for Noise.
The new law does not prohibit the torpedo cane, which makes a loud report when struck on the sidewalk. But this must be loaded with a cap every time it is used. The carriage pistol, which in the past has caused much noise and a corresponding percentage of injuries, is outlawed.

Everything is Cheap.
Notwithstanding the belief that a great percentage of Fourth of July novelties are now manufactured or controlled by a trust, these articles will be cheaper this year than ever. For ten cents a patriotic candle may fire a ten-cent candle, intended to give a pure white or electric light effect. An Egyptian battery can be started, with a naval battle effect, for twenty-five cents a battle, or a complete shower of genuine stars can be produced at the rate of five cents a shower. Single star effects sell for a penny apiece, with a dozen star flashes each.

New Three-legged Rockets.
Three-legged rockets will take the place of the single-stick rocket this year, making them easier to handle. The tripod-rocket can be set anywhere.

Torpedo Watch is New.
A novelty this year will be the torpedo or cap pistol, watch, which will fire a cap every time it is opened. In appearance it is a watch, with chain attached, and any boy can own one for ten cents.

Sizes of Crackers Prohibited.
All crackers over five inches in length and more than three-eighths of an inch thick are prohibited by law. Dealers say there are not, and never have been, dynamite crackers, but giant powder is used in the large ones. All sizes of the small package crackers can be used as heretofore, without fear of running into the arms of a policeman and the law. But no explosives must be thrown towards persons or animals.

TRINITY BOYS WIN JUNIOR LEAGUE CUP

Take Another Game—Others Cannot Catch Up—Y. M. C. A. Boys Gain First Victory.

By defeating the Riverview park club baseball nine Saturday afternoon the team representing the Knights of the Holy Cross of the Trinity church won the Junior League trophy cup for the coming year, keeping their standing from which they will not be able to gain first place, there being but one more game on the schedule for each team.

The standing of the clubs now is as follows:

Knights of the Holy Cross..... 1000
Riverview Park club..... 400
Baptist Church Boys club..... 400
Y. M. C. A. Junior department..... 200

The contests Saturday were both interesting, the afternoon one being the winner of the cup was determined and the morning because the Association nine gained its first victory of the season. The afternoon game resulted in a score of nine to four and was umpired by George Senneil. The batteries were: for the Knights of the Holy Cross, Griffiths and Bressingham; and for the Riverview club, Seville and Day. In the morning the Y. M. C. A. team defeated the aggregation representing the Baptist club and on account of the wet and slippery condition of the diamond and field and the inability of the players to accurately handle the water and mud-covered ball a large score of 23 to 17 in favor of the Association team was piled up. Campbell and Strang, Richards and Dreyer held the battery positions of the Association and Erdman and Wilson and McCaffrey negotiated the battery places for the Baptists.

The game was umpired by J. A. Ward. Next week the Baptist and Trinity boys will meet and the Y. M. C. A. and Riverview clubs be matched. The Trinity club feels sure of victory and should they succeed and if the Y. M. C. A. boys should defeat the Riverview boys as they will try their ut-

CROPS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTY SELDOM LOOKED BETTER THAN AT PRESENT

Damage Done by Rain Is About Repaired—Stock Well Fed With Excellent Grass.

The condition of all crops throughout Rock county is reported to be excellent at present. In fact better than it has been at a corresponding time in the season for many a year. The damage caused by the washing of the heavy rains has about been repaired and everything is growing rapidly. The best fields which had to be partially replanted after the severe storm are being cultivated and look favorable for a monster yield. At Menominee, Michigan, greater destruction to this crop was done than around here by the rains. The grass is also luxuriant in growth and stock fed on it is very good.

Well-Bred Cattle.
John Fisher of Center recently sold a bunch of Durham cattle at $25 per hundred weight. Among the lot were some steers, only sixteen months old, which brought more than six dollars each. Baby beef brings high prices at all times but it is only the well-bred and well-fed stock which matures young.

"DOWN THE TRAIL" IS FULL OF INTEREST

The Side Shows at the Portland Exposition Are Good, Because They Are Cheap.

Seven dollars will enable the visitor to the Lewis and Clark Exposition to see every concession on the Trail, the amusement thoroughfare of the centennial. At St. Louis it cost the neighborhood of $30 to see the "Pike" with its seventy shows; many of them which were not worth the price of admission. The Trail offers thirty-five of the "finest" attractions ever included in an exposition. Fancy seeing thirty-five shows for seven dollars.

The most expensive concession on the Trail is the Carnival of Venice, a spectacular production designed by the "King of the Baller," Bolossy Firaly. The price of admission to this attraction is fifty cents, and after seeing the show the fee will be pronounced reasonable. Five hundred persons participate on the stage. The scene is laid in Venice and by means of some very fine scenic offerings the illusion is faithfully carried out, even to the canals of that Italian city. The canals of Venice is a termischoean extravaganza of the highest order.

Leaving the Carnival of Venice the visitor meanders over to the Homer Davenport farm. Paying twenty-five cents he enters and beholds the foremost cartoonist of the world contentedly seated on a rustic bench before a crudely built log house. Surrounding the illustrious penman are hundreds of blooded fowls, several specimens of hordes of Arabian blood and a magnificent Hambletonian. Davenport will be found affable, urbane and democratic, and if the visitor is of the right sort the cartoonist may offer him a modest sketch as a memento.

Across the way from Davenport's is the Klondike mining exhibit. This concession is pre-eminent from an educational standpoint and offers the visitor a truthful portrayal of mining methods in vogue in the gold fields of Alaska. The building that houses the show is designed inside in panoramic effect and a full-sized placer mine is found in operation. Clean-ups of real gold worth $10,000 are made every hour. The admission is twenty-five cents.

Following the Trail the visitor enters the Streets of Cairo, paying a fee of fifteen cents. He is in Egypt, in the midst of all that is Egyptian. Strange, curbed people are seen on all sides, now a diminutive donkey laden by a boy in flowing robe dashes past, or a monstrous camel loaded with human freight lumbers through the street. Frenzied look-alike warriors dance about in mock combat. The shrieking strains of curious Oriental instruments are wafted from the theatre on the soil, Oregon, ozone. For twenty-five cents the visitor gains entrance to this foreign show house and spends a pleasant half hour viewing the antics of a strange people.

A wonderful show is located almost opposite the streets of Cairo, the Infant Incubators. There is no gaiety about this concession. It represents the most astonishing achievements of modern science, the nurturing of the human being by artificial means. In the pleasing little building housing this attraction are several ingeniously constructed incubators containing real live infants. Visitors are allowed to gaze at them through plate glass, and apparently the tots are content to remain in their snug homes. The admission to the infant incubators is twenty-five cents.

And so on down the Trail the visitor may meander. A great many of the shows offer admissions as low as ten cents. The visitor finds lowish shows and serious shows, or he may devote his time to instructive shows. No matter how hard he "hits the Trail," he cannot spend more than thirty-five dollars, which will admit him to seven-fifty attractions, unless he chooses to take in a show more than once. The entire list of concessions, and their prices of admission, follows:

IRRIGATION TALK OF GUY MITCHELL AGAIN

Noted Expert on Western Irrigation Plans Discusses the Questions.

While the present irrigation fund of $25,000,000 would not go very far, distributed throughout the 16 great western states and territories, in two, three, or four million dollar amounts, it is being made to carry forward a quite unique and comprehensive irrigation development, by making the irrigation works pay for themselves.

In other words it is not the program of the Reclamation Service to build large projects complete immediately, but to finish a small but independent portion of each project so that the water rights of the lands thus irrigated may be sold to the settlers and thus immediately furnish money with which to carry the work still farther. "The government is in each case starting the works, and allowing the private itself and the settlers to provide for its completion. And as the government projects the lands are being eagerly taken up by settlers, there is no question of the success and completion of the works, of however great magnitude.

Eastern Business Men Interested.
That the eastern part of the United States is not indifferent to the national benefit of irrigation and the development of the west is shown by the intelligent resolutions passed by the annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers held at Atlanta, Ga., on May 21.

Recognizing that the reclamation of western desert acres will furnish the most market possible for eastern manufacturers, the resolutions commended the administration of Secretary Hitchcock of the Interior Department who is charged with the administration of the irrigation law, endorsed Director Walcott and Chief Engineer Newell of the Reclamation Service and pledged to them the support of some 3,300 of the largest manufacturers in the United States in their continued efforts to carry out the national irrigation act for the creation of the largest possible number of prosperous American homes.

"The resolutions further" set forth that the profound importance of the social and philanthropic features of the irrigation movement and the subdivision of large land tracts into small homes should be impressed on the American people to the end that America should become a nation of rural homes rather than one of large cities.

The resolutions call attention to the great importance of the national public lands, the weakness of the present land laws and strongly support the recommendation of President Roosevelt's Public Land Commission for a thorough reform in our land laws to the end that the public lands be held strictly for real settlers and against speculators.

Dry Land Reclamation.
Colorado, Wyoming and Montana are apparently wailing up to the fact that several million acres of land in those states which have been for years grazed upon by cattle and sheep and considered worthless for agriculture in any form, can be made to grow very profitable crops of grains, forage, and in some cases even vegetables and fruit. The rainfall in these regions is comparatively slight, but it happens to come at just the growing season of the crops and the soil is so wonderfully retentive of moisture as well as productive that from 15 to 20 bushels of wheat per acre and other crops in proportion can be raised on as little as 12 or 16 inches of rainfall, which in eastern states would not suffice to half way mature a crop.

The "dry farm" experts state that there are at least a hundred million acres of land distributed throughout the western states, in some places in very considerable tracts and in other sections in small patches, where the climatic conditions are such that the lands will yield crops as good as the average farm lands of the Mississippi Valley. This class of development by better cultivation of the soil, in connection with the introduction by the government of foreign plants specially adapted to American arid land conditions and further joined by the great agricultural development under national irrigation will cause in the next ten years a mighty transformation in the west.

WHAT OTHERS ARE DOING.

The Youngstown, Ohio, Telegram, has adopted a scheme for increasing its circulation which, though not new by any means, seems to be productive of good results. It is running a contest for popular residents of Youngstown for summer trips and those who naturally read the paper buy several extra copies daily to get the coupons necessary to send in with their vote.

The Washington Sunday Star, which is only a few months old, reports remarkable gains in classified advertising. The Star claims to have a much larger bona fide circulation in the District of Columbia than any other Sunday paper and more than double the circulation of one of its Sunday contemporaries.

The Elmira Daily Gazette, the oldest paper in Southern New York, has changed hands. E. R. Davenport, formerly of the Omaha World-Herald, has become a part-owner of the paper and assistant manager. Rumor has it that Bryan and Hearst influence is back of the deal. The Gazette is the most influential democratic organ in the Southern New York.

The Springfield, Ohio, Sun, now has the morning field in that city all to itself. The Press-Republic was recently purchased by James C. Cox, owner of the Dayton News, who has changed that paper to an afternoon publication and renamed it the Springfield News. The Sun's influence will therefore be extended and its value increased to advertisers who wish to use a morning issue.

The Evening Times is the name of a new daily newspaper that has just appeared in Meriden, Conn. The salutatory states that it is the organ of no faction or party, and that it aspires to "lead Heriden's altruistic and intellectual progress."

George D. Crater, formerly business manager of the Charlotte, N. C., Observer, has acquired a controlling interest in the Raleigh, N. C., Times, and assumed business management of the Times the first of the month. Mr. Crater has long been connected with newspaper work in his state and is noted for his ability to "get there."

ROCKFORD PITCHER WILL MANAGE THE BELOIT NINE
Contract Closed Saturday With George Eubner Who Has Been With Beloit This Season.

He is a baseball player of ability and experience. This season he has been pitching for the Elgin team. Last year he was with Sioux City in the Western league. He has also played on several of the Chicago semi-professional nines. Under the new management it is hoped that Beloit's team will be greatly improved and its drawing power increased in consequence.

The Business Men's New York Train.
"The Pennsylvania Special," Elighteen-Chicago-New York Train, which begins running on Sunday next, June 11th, will be emphatically the business man's train. Full business day in Chicago before starting at 2:45 p. m. arriving in New York at 9:45 next morning after a car breakfast in dining car. Full business day in New York, starting on return trip at 3:55 p. m. on the Pennsylvania Special, reaching Chicago the next morning at 8:55.

So can the New Yorker have a business day in Chicago and return to New York the same evening. By the Pennsylvania special he leaves New York at 3:55 p. m., arrives Chicago 5:55 next morning. Leaves Chicago same day at 2:45 p. m. and reaches New York next morning at 9:45 o'clock.

VAUGHAN ON THE SUNDAY THEATRE

MAKES FEW INFORMAL REMARKS BEFORE MORNING SERMON.

Wants Them to Use Influence Against Repealment of Sunday Closing Ordinances.

In connection with the announcements preceding the morning sermon yesterday, Rev. R. M. Vaughan made a few informal remarks on the Sunday theatre, calling attention to the facts that a Sabbath day performance was illegal, that in other cities it had proven unprofitable to the management, that for the actors and actresses it was a seven-day slavery, that the present sacred concerts would develop into the regular vaudeville bill and closed with a suggestion to his hearers to be present at the meeting of the common council this evening when he understood, an effort would be made to recall the Sunday closing ordinance. He asked them to use their influence with their representatives, the aldermen, and not allow a repealment by default. His words were as follows:

"The question of do we want a Sunday theatre? We must answer it at once for it is easier to keep a thing out than to put it out. It is not a question of the theatre in itself, whether its present influence is good or bad. I trust the day is coming when the theatre will be fully reclaimed to good uses. And any man who is providing the public with clean, helpful amusement has my applause. But we don't want a Sunday theatre. It's illegal. The laws of both city and state forbid it. Is that no matter? Does no one in Janesville have any respect for law? Are we bringing up our children in the practical creed that laws may be deliberately disregarded by any man whose greed surprises him? Then let us not be surprised if they learn to disregard all law whether it be law of city, home or God and become both political and moral corruptionists. I tell you that what Joseph Polk calls 'the Missouri idea' must become the national idea. Laws are made to be enforced. If they are not good laws, repeal them, but unless we want to destroy the sanctity of all law and strike out the very foundations of organized society, so long as we have laws, enforce them. We've had enough enactment of good laws and enough good people and then non-enforcement to please bad people. Two wrongs do not make a right. If all wrongs do not make a right, then let us place than theatres are open illegally on Sunday close them too."

Is Unprofitable.
And we don't want a repeal of the ordinance against the Sunday theatre. Such a theatre had in itself. Even from the managerial point of view it is poor policy. Does the theatre want the patronage of reputable people? Does it care anything for their respectability? Then let it not affront public sentiment with Sunday performances. In the long run the Sunday theatre does not pay. Some time ago the theatrical men of Chicago tried to secure a stringent state law which would close all theatres on Sunday. This is what a prominent manager had to say about it:

"We have to work seven days in the week and fifty-two weeks in the year. We never have a rest. We are getting tired of this continuous performance. We began to keep our houses open on Sunday some years ago because we thought the public demanded Sunday performances. Now we know better. In New York the theatrical managers find that they have not lost a cent on account of Sunday closing. On the contrary, they are ahead, because the weekly attendance is the same and the incidental expenses of the Sunday performances are dropped. Our stage hands, employees and orchestras are obliged to work every day of the week and they have a right to ask the public to give them a day off. It is all nonsense to argue that the working people cannot come to a show unless it is given on Sunday. Any man who can afford to come to a theatre on Sunday can afford and can find the time to come on a weekday. Monday and Tuesday nights are light nights in Chicago. If we close on Sundays we will bring up the average attendance of the week-days. Actors themselves are anxious to rest one day a week, but they cannot do it in Chicago. There are a number of us who would be willing to close up on Sunday, but we cannot do this unless all come in. For that reason we want the legislature to pass an anti-Sunday theatre bill."

Seven-Day Slavery.
Nor do we want a seven-day slavery for any class of people. If I have any perception of the genius of the labor movement it is an effort to secure for all who toil, tolerable conditions. Are the rank and file of the working people ready to down actors and actresses to seven-day slavery? There is not a man or woman on the stage who wants it. "This system of making actors work seven nights a week is an outrage," said Lillian Russell, in justification of the refusal of herself and company to play upon Sunday. "They are human beings, and are just as much entitled to rest on the Sabbath as the banker or the hod-carrier. I believe the theatre-going public should have some consideration for the actor, and not ask him to make a clown out of himself every day in the week for the sake of making his living."

Would Drop Mask.
And the Sunday theatre is not a good thing for the great public. Sacred concerts? In a week the mask would be dropped and the usual bill of topical song-singers, acrobats and skit dancers would hold the stage. Are the last performers good Sunday evening instructors of our boys and girls? Will such entertainment on the sacred day conduce to the public morality? The Christian Sabbath still means something. In its preservation the future of civilization is at stake. And they who permit its overthrow are recreant to a lofty trust."

"See Your Aldermen."
See your Aldermen. It is said that an effort is to be made on Monday evening to repeal the anti-theatre ordinance. Your representatives in the council want to serve their constituents. They have the public welfare at heart. Tell them you want that ordinance let alone. Tell them you want it enforced. Tell them more courageously and they will welcome your expression of opinion. And it would not be a bad idea to be present at the council meeting Monday evening. Some things go by default, but there is omniscience in aroused public opinion.

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday,
June 12, 1865.

The Orator of the Day.
We understand that the committee on speakers has secured Senator Van Wyck of Kenosha, to deliver the oration on the Fourth. He is a finished scholar and a fine speaker, and will make an excellent address. We congratulate the committee on their success and on their selection.

July 4th! July 4th!!—The final meeting will be held at the court room this evening to complete the arrangements. The committees are prepared to make their reports and the general attendance of citizens is requested, to adopt or reject the report.

If we cannot celebrate the anniversary of our national day now, when our brave and victorious troops are returning from their brilliant success in crushing out the gigantic rebellion that threatened our existence as a nation, when can we do so?

Remember the place (court room) and hour, sharp. By Order of Committee.

Celebration of the Fourth of July.—
For a few days our citizens have been attempting to hold a meeting to make arrangements to celebrate the coming Fourth in an appropriate manner. As yet they have failed.
There is but one way at this time to make it a success and that is for the business men to attend the meeting tonight and subscribe liberally the necessary means to enable the committee already appointed to proceed with the arrangements to appropriately honor the natal day of American Independence. It is to their interest peculiarly, and would alike be creditable to them and the city in which they live. Will it be done?
The time is short and if we have a celebration tonight is the time to decide it in. To the meeting at the court room this evening, then, come one and all.

"Goodbye to Ring."

"There Is Nothing More In Pugilism For Me,"
Says Jeffries.

By JAMES J. JEFFRIES.
World's Heavyweight Champion.
"Just as sure as I won the championship fairly and squarely I now lay it aside and retire. I never was more sincere about anything in my life."

"There is nothing more in pugilism for me, and I am through. There is no one I can fight, and without an opponent I can't make anything at the fighting game."

"Of course my wife was anxious to have me leave the ring; but the chief reason for my retirement is as I said—
there is no more money in the game for me. Why, there is no one the public would pay to see fight me. I couldn't make training expenses. The public may like to see me fight, but it doesn't want to be bunked."

"The Munroe fight is a good example. That fight never should have been arranged, but he kept following me around with a chip on his shoulder, and my friends forced me into the match."

"He was the easiest opponent I ever had. I could have finished him in one round—in fact, I did have him out, and they shored the round on me so as to give Munroe a little more chance.
I got him as soon as the second round started, however."

"I don't want to criticize the other fellows too much, but I'll say this:
Fitz right now is better than all the rest of them. In leaving the ring I want to say that Fitz is the greatest and craftiest of all the men I have met.
He has a style all his own, and it can't be imitated."

"I consider Fitz a wonder. He hits a blow like the kick of a mule and can take punishment. Why, it was Fitz who gave me confidence and made me think I was championship material.
When he landed some of those hard drives on me in our first fight and they didn't faze me I knew I was safe. If he couldn't put me out no other fighter could."

"Everybody knows my stand in regard to Johnson. Aside from my objection to fighting a colored man, you

A BENDEL LACE HAT

Black Chantilly lace is cleverly combined with embroidered chiffon pear-shaped motifs in the making of this picturesque hat. The lace is ruffled over the crown and the brim, the edge falling in certain fashion along the brim, but supported at close intervals by the wire frame. The under brim displays the embroidered chiffon motifs—these, too, held by the loops of black silk wire that form the frame. The crown is encircled with a thick wreath, made of black satin ribbon loops, this mounted upon a wire so that it may readily be bent to the desired shape. Under the brim a spray of wisteria in the natural violet tones is posed; and long black satin ribbon strings depend from the back of the hat and are carefully drawn around to the front, but are not tied under the chin.

"I know there has been talk about Marvin Hart, but there was nothing to that. I never saw Hart fight, and I hear he is a big fellow now, but from all accounts he is chained to the floor.
He can't move out of his own way.
Didn't Root beat him and also Gardner? Where does he get on with me, then?"

"There's no use mentioning Willie,
O'Brien, McCoy or any of the others.
You know they wouldn't draw any more than Munroe did, and I made less than $2,000 on that farce."

"I was never knocked down during my career, and no fighter ever had me in distress. That yarn about Munroe putting me on the floor in our Battle exhibition was fiction, pure and simple.
I honestly believe that I could stand with arms down and take any punch given on the face or jaw without going to the floor."

"Tom Sharkey gave me the hardest fight of my career, but Fitzsimmons is the best man I ever fought and gave me some hard raps. I put up my greatest battle against Tom Sharkey in our twenty-five round go at Coney Island, N. Y., Nov. 3, 1899. I was in the poorest shape of all my contests, and the fact that I went through those twenty-five terrific rounds and won makes me name that fight as my hardest and best."

Suffered for Years With Dyspepsia, "Seven Barks" Cured Her.

Read this letter which Mr. E. D. Chaffin, of Irad, Ky., writes us, dated June 11, 1904:
"I have used one bottle of Seven Barks and can truthfully say that it has done more good than anything I have ever taken. I suffered for years with Dyspepsia, and nothing helped me until I tried your Seven Barks."
The curative value of a medicine can be determined only by application. If troubled with Dyspepsia, you're making a big mistake if you don't try Seven Barks. No matter how many other medicines you have taken, you have no right to say that Seven Barks won't cure you—it certainly won't cure you "in the bottle," you've got to reach the seat of the disorder, there's no other way to effect a cure. Seven Barks is a simple vegetable remedy, the dose is small and it is pleasant to take. It's all it's claimed to be, or we wouldn't sell it. We make more profit on other Dyspepsia cures, but people want Seven Barks and won't take anything else. If it didn't cure, we wouldn't agree to hand back so cents for the "empty bottle," besides, running the risk of losing a good, steady customer. We sell it with the distinct understanding: No cure, no pay.

AUTOMOBILE DON'TS.
The Book of the Automobile, by Robert T. Sloss has just come from the press of the Appleton company. It contains among other good things a list of "Don'ts" which the public will appreciate, and which every chauffeur should cut out and paste in his hat.

The fad for automobiles has developed so rapidly that the machines are now in the hands of all sorts of people, and the only wonder is that accidents are not more frequent. The man who wouldn't attempt to drive a horse possessed of ordinary spirit, drives a machine of extraordinary destructive possibilities, with perfect complacency.

With one hand on the horn and the other on the lever, he gives due notice before swinging around a corner on two wheels at a 10-mile clip. There was a time when this kind of a performance was entertaining because of its novelty. People scattered to cover like chickens with a frolicsome dog in pursuit, but that day has passed.

The chauffeur no longer occupies a pedestal, and while the vehicle which he propels is fearfully and wonderfully made, admiration for the carriage is frequently lost in disgust for the man who occupies the box. The automobile is a wonderful invention, and while it will never succeed the horse for the country road, it has come to stay, and will be more generally used when prices make it possible.

The men who operate them should be governed by common sense, never forgetting the fact that the rights of the public are sacred. The list of "Don'ts" follows:
"Don't disobey the rules of the road."
"Remember to keep to the right and pass on the left."
"Don't forget that pedestrians have the same rights as vehicles at street crossings."
"Remember that vehicles do not have the right of way at street crossings."

"Don't forget that your rate of speed should never exceed the legal rate, ten miles an hour in the greater city."
"Remember, when local conditions require, to adopt even a lower rate of speed than the legal rate."
"Don't get rattled."

"Remember it is the 'other fellow' who always loses his head in a crisis."
"Don't insist upon your rights."
"Remember that the 'other fellow' may not know your rights, and an insistence on your part is bound to result in an accident."
"Don't argue with trolley-cars, express-wagons, brewery-trucks, or other heavy bodies found in the public thoroughfare."
"Remember that the drivers of these powerful vehicles generally operate on the theory that might is right."
"Don't expect women and children to get out of your way."
"Remember that women and children don't know how to avoid danger."
"Don't run any unnecessary risks."
"Remember that while the automobile is flexible, powerful, and easily controlled, you may make a slip."
"Don't drink."
"Remember that nine-tenths of the accidents occur to automobiles driven by intoxicated chauffeurs."
"Don't sneak away in case of accident."
"Remember that the true gentleman chauffeur, although he may not be responsible for the misfortune, stands his ground."
"Don't fail to be a gentleman under any provocation."
"Remember that the Golden Rule practiced in the road will save you no end of trouble, expense, and worry."

part of the Sunday program. It opens up a new field for the pulpit and a lively crusade against the innovation will follow. Just how much influence this will have upon public sentiment time alone will determine. The correction of an evil for which the people are responsible, means more than simply a spasmodic effort to suppress the evil. The common council is the people's representative. The men comprising this body are selected and elected by the people. They represent in morals and business the sentiment expressed by a liberal majority at the polls last spring. This majority knew then, as well as it knows today, that it was voting for a wide open town. This was what the people wanted and there is no occasion for surprise at results. The Sunday night theatre may be decried, as it should be, by people who believe in the sacredness of the Sabbath, but this will not close its doors. The harm was committed at the polls last April, and it will continue to exist until an enlightened public conscience takes the matter in hand. The duties of citizenship is a topic which the pulpit is prone to neglect. There should be no politics about city government, and there is no reason why the pulpit should not take a lively interest in men and measures. The responsibility for the existence of moral evil, is with the individual voter, and he can not escape from it. These evils infect every community in proportion to the moral or immoral sentiment which prevails and Janesville is no exception to the rule.

The Pennsylvania railroad company has wiped out all records by running a train from Chicago to New York in 16 hours. The average time was 63 miles per hour. A new 18-hour train is about to be installed and the trial train was to test the road and equipment. There are a good many moral questions besides the Sunday theatre, that are a little off color. Public sentiment needs elevating all along the line, and the campaign of education, if inaugurated, should be pushed with intelligence and vigor.

Mr. Dalrymple of Glasgow is of the opinion that Chicago will do well to go slow on traction company investments. He finds conditions in this country quite different from those prevailing in his home city. The Employers' Association has nothing to settle and the strikers will discover, sooner or later, that the most important question which confronts them is, "where to find a job."

The policyholders of the "Equitable" are fully protected, and have no occasion for uneasiness. Under new management the company will maintain its old-time popularity. The people voted in favor of a Sunday night theatre in April, and the chances are that they would do the same thing again tomorrow, if the opportunity was offered.

When the governor gets through reforming the state he may find time to give a little attention to Milwaukee. As an all around reformer he has no rival. The President is sound in advising Japan and Russia to get together and settle their differences. Ten years for Bigelow, with three years off for good behavior, is the sentence of the Milwaukee financier.

PRESS COMMENT.
Oshkosh Northwestern: "Eljah" Dowie may not be a great man, but he certainly grates on the nerves of a good many people. Madison Journal: It is the moral and physical duty of every female to look pretty, even if she has to scramble her hair. Chicago Chronicle: King Oscar will probably have an easier time of it now that he is boss of only one-half of that bifurcated kingdom. Marinette Eagle-Star: The utility of human retribution is evident when it is remembered that Bluebeard Hoch has but one neck to stretch.

Milwaukee Daily News: There is no graft in the Japanese army and navy. Which may explain some things. Chicago Inter Ocean: If this thing continues, the kings will have to form a union, if only to compel their employers to give them the usual thirty day notice.

Chicago Record-Herald: Henry James says the newspapers use "sloppy English." This is letting us down easy. We feared Henry might accuse some of us of "slinging bum grammar." Madison Journal: The woman who has raised a child properly has done more for the world than she who has read papers to clubs until their patience and furniture are both worn out. Rockford Register-Gazette: If Norway can't find a king elsewhere, there are several playing the part in musical comedies in Chicago, doing a poor business, who might be able to get away. Evening Wisconsin: Oxford's recognition of the scholastic standing of the University of Wisconsin is worthy of pride, as Harvard is the only other educational institution that has been similarly honored. "Rah! rah! rah." Milwaukee Sentinel: An Ohio paper is authority for the statement that Eddie Bok of the Ladies' Home Journal can "swear like a pirate when he gets angry." It is no more than fair to Mr. Bok to pass his information along. Exchange: The highest honors in the senior class at Cornell have been awarded to Miss Jessie R. Fausset, a colored woman, and the only woman student of her race in the college of arts. In her course she has had to compete with something like 100 white students. Madison Journal: At last some one—it is a trade paper and so selfishly interested—has a theory as to why night caps are worn. It is said they keep the head warm and so promote sleep. Eventually we shall find out why coats are made with two buttons on the tails. Everything has a cause. El Paso Herald: Spain has decided to order eight heavy battleships and other craft to correspond, in rehabilitating the navy that Dewey and Sampson-Schley deprived her of. But she will have them built in England and not over here. Schwab tried to get the order, but the Dons felt that that was too much like rubbing it in. Fond du Lac Commonwealth: It is stated that the Lewis and Clark fair, which is now in full blast at Portland had cost an even $5,000,000 up to the date of the formal opening. The buildings are valued at $25,000,000. This ought to make the Portland show an object of much interest, and one well worth a visit.

Fond du Lac Reporter: The plan of the Woman's club to have historic spots in Fond du Lac suitably marked is a commendable one. The ladies are entitled to generous assistance in their project. Every year that passes, sees some landmark disappear. Memories are fast passing away. It will be but a few years before none will be left to point out the places that should be permanently marked. Baltimore American: The contention in "The Mikado" that if a man is pronounced dead by the Mikado he ceases legally to exist and has to stay dead, is regarded as very funny in a comic opera, but the same thing has just been asserted by a Pennsylvania court in the case of a woman pronounced dead, who has just appeared and wants back her estate, settled by the decision of the court. The legal decision of her death is affirmed, though at present the angry woman is a particularly lively corpse.

Bryan's Commoner: The notice of the funeral of Mrs. Jacob A. Riss contained this request: "Friends are requested to send no flowers, but give the money instead to the poor." That is worth thinking about, and acting upon. If the spirits of our dead look back to us, will they not rejoice more at the sight of hungry ones fed and naked ones clothed than at the sight of costly flowers withering to decay upon their tombs? The smiles of those to whom the opportunity to smile is seldom given; the rejoicings of those to whom the opportunity for rejoicing seldom comes—these will be more welcome tributes to the memory of the dead than all the flowers that might be heaped upon their graves.

Exchange: Henry James, the novelist, gave the address to the graduating class of Bryn Mawr College in Philadelphia, Thursday. His theme was "The Question of Our Speech." He made a plea for "tidy speaking" and the "cultivation of perfect tone." Mr. James gave a cruel shock to the "sweet girl graduate" when he told them that their "newspapers are nothing but black eruptions of type, and they war like monsters; like maniacs breaking loose." It is with a suggestion of irony that the press refers to Mr. James as "originally an American, and now classified as an Englishman who has returned to his native beach." He declared that in millions of American homes are people who do not know how to enunciate vowel sounds.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Explorer Percy thinks that on this trip he is sure to reach the north pole, and says that it may be possible that the Garden of Eden will be discovered there, as has been asserted by many persons. He does not think so, but is willing to be agreeably surprised and welcome any residents that may be found. Several years ago an Alut reached this country with a great story of what he had seen and heard on a visit to the country, but it never convinced anyone of a serious turn of mind. If the north pole is the cradle of the human race it seems certain that many changes have taken place since that fateful day when Adam and Eve had to put on clothes and dig for a living. No wonder they went somewhere else, but there is nothing in holy writ to indicate that they ever abode in an iceberg country.

Sense of Humor.
Every man or woman born believes that, whatever other quality he may lack or possess, he is endowed with an unerring judgment as to what is the proper object of laughter, what is really funny; but he is convinced that this unerring sense of humor is granted to very few indeed besides himself.—The Academy. Criticize European Eyes. A Manchester (England) man asked a Japanese what struck him most about the European face. He replied that it was the horrible round eyes. A Hindoo, to whom he put the same question, said that it was the glimmering eyes of the European that he noticed—meaning, presumably, half-closed.

War on Mosquitoes.
The Hygienic Institute of Breslau is making war on mosquitoes. Municipal experts will destroy the mosquitoes which pass the winter in the cellars and basements of houses. Malachite green is to be used for destroying the larvae in ponds.

Preliminary Returns to the Department of Agriculture Show Prospect of Various Grains.
Washington, June 12.—Preliminary returns to the chief of bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture on the acreage of spring wheat sown indicate an area of about 17,613,000 acres, an increase of 472,000 acres, or 2.8 per cent, from the estimate of the acreage sown last year. The average condition of spring wheat on June 1 was 83.7, as compared with 93.4 at the corresponding date last year, 95.9 on June 1, 1903, and a ten-year average of 94.4. The total reported area in oats is about 27,683,000 acres, an increase of 42,000 acres, or 2.0 per cent, in the area sown last year. The average condition of oats on June 1 was 92.3, against 89.2 on June 1, 1904; 85.5 at the corresponding date in 1903 and a ten-year average of 90.1. The acreage reported as under barley is less than that sown last year by about 172,000 acres, or 2.4 per cent. The average condition of barley is 93.7, against 90.5 on June 1, 1904; 91.5 at the corresponding date in 1903 and a ten-year average of 89.9. The acreage under spring rye shows a reduction of 3.8 per cent, from that sown last year. The average condition of rye is 93.6, against 86.3 on June 1, 1904; 90.6 at the corresponding date in 1903 and 88.9 the mean of the corresponding averages of the last ten years. The report on the acreage and condition of rice will be issued on July 15.

HOOSIERS TRAPPED BY THE HORSE GAME
Which Mr. Atwood-Walker Was Prevented by Providence from Working in Rock County.
Down in Goshen, Indiana, Louis Vail, the best-known criminal lawyer in the northern section of the state, has been taken in by the identical "horse game" which was sprung on E. D. McGowan of this city and C. E. Udall of Beloit on April 17. The swindle was perpetrated two weeks ago but the victim succeeded in keeping the story suppressed until yesterday. A prosperous-looking but plainly dressed man, no doubt the same Mr. E. T. Atwood-Walker, who was going to do fine things for Evansville in a business way and greatly impressed the legal fraternity of Beloit and Janesville, went into the Vail law-office a fortnight ago and introduced himself as Robert Watson of Benton township. Mr. Vail was born and reared on a farm in Benton township and seems to feel that it is his duty to exert a watchful eye over the affairs. There hasn't been a Benton township case since he began the practice of law that he has not been engaged in. But Mr. Vail did not recall Robert Watson's sister. "While I was here I thought I would come in and see you about a little matter of law," said the caller. "I am having some trouble with a man named Joe McDonald of Elkhart. He bought a horse of me and later refused to take him. The horse is just as I represented him and McDonald was to pay me $200. Of course I don't want any lawsuit. I never had one in my life. But I want to leave the matter in your hands, and I will come in and see you the next time Jim brings me in." There was no visiting, no waste motion. The caller without visible effort left, and Vail was deeply impressed with a man who did business that way. Then the lawyer turned to his stenographer and dictated a letter to Joseph E. McDonald of Elkhart and urged an immediate settlement. Within a few days Davis & Shafer of Goshen called on Mr. Vail. They stated that they represented Joseph E. McDonald of Elkhart, who, they said, would be willing to make a compromise even at a sacrifice, and he enclosed a check made payable to L. V. Vail for $150. Vail, however, would not settle without his client's consent. Within a couple of days Watson came in and Vail informed him of the proposition. They went to Davis & Shafer's office. The matter was again discussed and an agreement reached. "But how do I know about this check?" asked Watson. "This fellow has gone back on a clean-cut proposition with me once and I want to know about this check." "Oh, the check is absolutely all right, Mr. Watson," Lawyer Davis said. "I telephoned to the bank at Elkhart and found that he had a nice account there." Vail and his client went back to the former's office, both expressing satisfaction at having avoided a lawsuit with a man whose testimony might be uncertain. The client paid Mr. Vail his fee and then asked him to endorse the check. Vail then walked with his client to the bank cashier and saw that Robert Watson got the money. Before the check could be presented for payment at the Elkhart bank, of course, Mr. McDonald took the precaution to withdraw his account and clear out for new fields. Whether or not the game in this instance was worked by one man, as was done in Rock county, does not appear, the correspondent taking it for granted that there were really two men. Mr. Vail is out $142. It is stated that the game has been worked elsewhere in Indiana but that the lawyers have pocketed their losses without a murmur in order that the public might not learn of their gullibility. The chance visit of C. D. Rosa of Beloit in Janesville on the day the deal was being closed up here and his accidental mention of his part in the same game in Beloit spoiled all the cleverly laid plans of Mr. Atwood-Walker and the $200 which Lawyer Udell of the Line City drew out for his client still remains in the attorney's safe-keeping.

CITY FATHERS AND THEIR NEIGHBORS
Will Hold a Joint Session Around Electric Fan at the City Hall This Evening.
When the august city fathers gather in the chamber of the common council at eight o'clock this evening it is altogether likely that a large gallery of neighborly friends and enemies will be waiting for them there. And was some form that the council purposes repealing the ordinance which has been in force for several years providing a penalty of from $10 to $100 for keeping open on Sunday any place of amusement for gain within the corporate limits of the city. The move to dispense with the regulation will be vigorously opposed and it is possible that the required two-thirds majority for the repeal, in case an effort is made to waive the by-laws and pass the measure the same night it is introduced, may fail to carry. It is possible that the measure permitting the laying of a switch-track on South Main street will also come up for final action. There will be a large amount of routine business.

Stomach Not Always First.
Not half so many divorces are caused by cold coffee as by a cold disposition. Whoever heard of a man seeking a separation because his wife let her biscuits burn while she kissed him in the morning? Nobody! But there are dozens of good cooks sighing for the husbands they forgot to kiss while they were busy with making the buttercakes.—Helen Rowland's "Digressions of Polly."

Breaking It Gently.
The boss was bending over a table, looking at the directory. The new office boy slipped up quietly and poked a note into his hand. The surprised boss opened it and read: "Honored sir: Your pants are ripped."

THIEVES RAID PUBLIC LIBRARY

RANSACKING A SCORE OF DRAWERS FOR CASH

BROKE INTO ANTON HOME

And Stole Suit of Clothes and Gold Watch—Thirty-Five Pennies Taken from Tea Store.

Between the hours of 3:30 and 6:30 yesterday afternoon burglars entered the home of S. Anton, the junk-dealer, at No. 6 Park street, by way of a window on the north side of the house and appropriated a new suit of clothes and a gold-filled watch case and movement valued at about $25. The family left the house just before 5:30 and the thieves who were evidently watching the house closely must have gotten in their work soon afterward. The screen was cut out of its frame and the window lifted. It appears that the burglars were still in the house after the family returned and remained in hiding on the second floor for some time. This was not known, however, until about 8:30 o'clock when a baby-carriage which had been left in front of a doorway in the front room was found shoved to one side.

Ransacked Public Library

The same parties, no doubt, were responsible for the raid on the public library. Almost under the shadow of the county jail they broke the glass in the upper sash of a basement window on the north side of the building in such a manner as to enable them to unlock the lower one, and having made their way to the upper rooms, went through every drawer and box on the premises. In the children's room they found a pasteboard receptacle containing about $2.00 in pennies but no other money was to be found. Mrs. Best, the librarian, had some $20 or $30 in her pocket-book but took the same with her when she left the building Saturday night. Janitor Weaver was out of the city over Sunday and this fact also was doubtless noted by the "gang." The work in the library was evidently done after dark as a number of burnt matches were found in the children's room.

Visited Tea Store

A rear door opening into the Janesville Spice Co.'s store on the Milwaukee street bridge was found open last night and when an investigation was made it was discovered that about 35 pennies had been taken out of the cash register. One of the rear windows has a defective latch and Manager R. J. Haltemann believes that entrance was effected by this route.

Tried Ford's Store

A window opening into J. A. Ford & Co.'s store was broken but nothing was discovered that anything had been taken. Possibly the burglars were frightened away before they had an opportunity to carry out their plan for robbing that establishment.

CURRENT NEWS NOTES

Whitton leaped from a passing vehicle and promptly terminated the excursion.

RIDES IN AN AUTO ON HIS BIRTHDAY

George Ferris Celebrated His Eighty-Fifth Birthday Yesterday.

Yesterday marked another milestone in the life of Mr. George C. Ferris of 114 Fourth avenue. Mr. Ferris came to Wisconsin fifty years ago, and with the exception of a few years spent on a farm in the town of Union he has been in active business in Janesville. Mr. Ferris does not look to be more than seventy years old. He holds his age and activity most remarkably. Since disposing of his ice business last March he has devoted his time largely in reading current literature, especially the legislative, general government and eastern war news, often spending eight to nine hours daily, and at times reading without the aid of glasses. When seen on the street he walks more like a man of fifty than eighty-five. This year, his birthday coming on Sunday, he was taken completely by surprise. Mrs. Severson of 255 South Bluff street, invited her father's family to dinner and her son, Mr. Charles Severson, met them at the church at the close of the services with his automobile. While he was being entertained in the parlor the auto was kept busy conveying the children, grand-children and great-grandchildren from their homes and Sunday schools to the rear of the Severson home, where loving hands prepared a sumptuous banquet in the dining-room. The table was a model of beauty, decorated with fresh flowers tastefully arranged. Plates were laid for twenty-three guests. The masterpiece was composed of beautiful fresh flowers and evergreen suspended from the chandelier wrought into two figures representing the number of milestones already past—85. When all was ready, dinner was announced and Mr. Ferris was ushered into the presence of his family of four generations, numbering twenty-three. He was taken completely by surprise. Besides those mentioned there were eight others who could not be present. An hour was passed in pleasant reminiscences while partaking of a bountiful repast such as the two Mrs. Seversons know how to dispense. On arriving home by the auto route, Mr. Ferris was asked if he felt older. His reply was, "No, I feel much younger." Thus showing the buoyancy of enjoyment of birthday parties for the aged and young as well as all others interested.

AGED RESIDENT OF COUNTY DEAD

SAMUEL HULL OF JOHNSTOWN, PASSEDAWAY SUNDAY.

LONG A RESIDENT OF COUNTY

Came Here in 1840—Was Married Sixty Years Ago—His Widow Survives Him.

After a continuous residence in the same homestead he came to after his marriage sixty years ago, Samuel Hull, one of the oldest and most respected residents of the town of Johnston, passed away Sunday morning shortly after one o'clock after an illness of but a week's duration. Mr. Hull was past eighty-four and within a few days of his final illness worked in his little garden and appeared in excellent health. On March 20 he and his wife celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary, at which some twenty-five friends, neighbors and relatives were present.

Born in York State
Samuel Hull was born February 18th, 1821, in Homer, Cortland county, New York. In 1840 he moved west with his parents and settled in Rock county. He was married on March 20, 1845, to Mary Jane Hunsley, who survives him. Eight children were born of this union, five of whom are dead and three surviving. The deceased are Mrs. Arthur Cary of this city, Mrs. Henry Willis of Minneapolis, and the Misses Eliza and Mary, and Ernest. The three surviving children are Edson, who is in the cattle business in Montana; Dr. Hull of Milton Junction, and George Hull, who conducts the home farm.

An Active Man
Up to the week of his death Mr. Hull was hale and hearty. Until he was seventy years of age he was an active worker on his farm and even within the past few years he has helped in the hay fields and cared for his little garden. At the sixtieth wedding anniversary held last March the seventy-five friends were either relatives or old friends of Mr. and Mrs. Hull. H. E. Cary of Janesville is a grandson.

Funeral Tuesday
The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon from his late residence and an effort is being made to secure Elder Bosworth of Beloit to officiate. The Johnston church having been Elder Bosworth's first charge and he and Mr. Hull being life-long friends.

MACHINE CO. TO EXPEND $25,000

IN ADDITIONS, REMODELING AND MORE FACTORY EQUIPMENT.

WILL BE DONE THIS SUMMER

Foundry To Be Enlarged and Franklin Street Building Raised One Story.

$25,000 or thereabouts will be expended this summer by the Janesville Machine company in building an addition to the foundry, remodeling the one-story building on Franklin street into a two-story structure and buying and installing some new machinery and factory equipment. The work on this project will be commenced about July 1 and the members of the corporation hope to have it completed within a month's time in order that everything will be in readiness for the handling of next year's deliveries when the season opens sometime in the early autumn.

Foundry Addition
The addition to the foundry on South River street will about double the size and capacity of that portion of the plant. It will be constructed north of the present building where now a number of sheds and wooden erections stand. The addition will be uniform in material (brick), pattern and height with the building now being used.

The Remodeling
The roof of the one-story building on Franklin street between the machine-shop and Pleasant street will be raised and the walls built up to form a two-story factory block. There will be other internal improvements made and some new machinery for various portions of the manufactory bought and put in place.

A Short Shut-Down
When the building and remodeling commences it will of course necessitate the closing down of some portions of the plant, but this will not be for any long period or through the entire plant. The ordinary run of work will not be greatly interfered with.

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued.)

"And so," Thomas continued, "I laid my plans accordingly. We rode to Boston separately, and she followed me on foot on the other side of the street to my house. She was waiting you." And with a great emphasis on the word prove, she dashed out of the room.

"This woman is curious. No doubt about it. But her conscience troubles her, and she's jealous of Petridge. There's no other explanation of this line of conduct."

"Ah, well," said Thomas, doubtfully. "If Marion had married Stackhouse purely from pique, and had been carrying on the hollow mockery for a whole year, because she was too proud to betray what she suffered to any living soul, it seems that there might be enough indelible material in her emotional nature to get up a good blaze at the first spark. Don't you think so?"

"Quite likely. It's logically put, anyhow. But about these proofs that Petridge didn't care for her. I am anxious to know the nature of them."

"So am I; but unfortunately they disappear from my story with this reference to them. Stella naturally supposed Marion went upstairs to get something. Imagine her surprise, five minutes later, to see her driving off in a carriage. In a short time the coachman came back. Mrs. Stackhouse, he said, had gone to Boston. Stella began to be exceedingly alarmed. What in the world could have occasioned this sudden freak she could not imagine. That her sister was terribly angry she saw, and the insane idea that perhaps she intended to tell Richard Petridge what had been said drove the poor girl quite distracted. She followed Marion to the city in the next train, and searched everywhere for her. It was after six when she arrived, and all the places of business were closed. This circumstance only increased the girl's alarm. She began to have what she calls a presentiment of evil. There were three places in town where she thought her sister might be—the houses of three friends. One of them was a way out in Roxbury. She made the rounds, exciting everywhere wonder and concern; but she abruptly refused all offers of escort. It was getting later and later all the time. Already it was dark, and the street lights were burning. Suddenly she remembered that Marion had the keys to the

"It is to be determined simply by the than death when she came in; but if you know my mother you can imagine the reception she got. Five minutes' explanation to my mother was sufficient. She opened her arms to the fugitive, and Stella North has been under her charge ever since."

"Ah! and you, of course, got the whole story from the girl?"

"That night. There is no question about her frankness or her honesty. If you could talk with her ten minutes you would be assured of that."

"Undoubtedly. And now for the facts. What are they?"

"Well, Lamm," said Thomas, "there are two sets of facts—the immediate and the remote. Whether the remote have any relation to the immediate I cannot tell. Nevertheless, you shall hear them first. To go back to Richard Petridge—"

"Of course," said Lamm. "Everything in the case seems to have a peculiar trick of going back to him."

"Still, I am unable to say that he has any connection with this murder, Lamm. It's a mystery, old man, as you will soon see. Stella merely corroborated the facts that I have told you already about Petridge's connection with the family. It was just as I said; he was in love with Marion, but how far they went, whether they were actually engaged or not, nobody knows; not even Stella, for the fact comes out that Marion is a very peculiar woman."

"Peculiar? Do you mean eccentric?"

"Well, eccentric, perhaps," said Thomas, doubtfully. "What I mean is that she is exceedingly self-willed and self-reliant; that she is naturally secretive, dislikes to make confidants, repels intercourse on topics near to her, dislikes to be sympathized with, and is extremely sensitive about little things that ordinary people would pass unobserved. Exaggerate all these qualities to an unusual degree, and you have the traits that make Marion Stackhouse peculiar. If you call such a character eccentric, she's eccentric. If you mean, however, the eccentricity that is allied to monomania or insanity, I fail to find that she has ever exhibited any traces of it. I questioned Stella very particularly on this point—as to whether her sister was in the habit of taking queer freaks. She says it might seem so to anybody who was not familiar with her peculiar temperament, but she never knew her to do anything without the possibility of a reason therefor."

"Just my idea of her exactly," said Lamm. "Anybody who has ever looked into the restless eye of a maniac knows what it is. I have talked with Marion Stackhouse face to face. She is no more insane than I am."

"I say this," continued Thomas, "to explain why it was that nobody knew whether Marion was really engaged to Petridge. On account of the opposition of Mr. North, it would have been a secret, anyway, to some extent, but Stella never knew. She only knows that they were together a great deal, till one night they presumably quarreled, for his visits ceased abruptly. And the next thing Stella knew, the engagement to Stackhouse was announced."

"Rheumatism is caused by uric acid or some other acid poison in the blood, which when deposited in the muscles and joints, produces the sharp, cutting pains and the stiffness and soreness peculiar to this disease. S. S. house in Marlboro street. There was a bare possibility that she had gone there in quest of the proofs she had so mysteriously mentioned. Stella set herself in that direction. It must have been about half-past nine o'clock when she approached the place, and saw—what do you think? Marion Stackhouse coming down the steps!

The imperturbable John Lamm for once lost his professional sang froid. He sprang to his feet and brought his hand down with a crash upon the top of his desk.

"Good heavens!" he cried. "And all this time you have been concealing this from me!"

CHAPTER XVI.

"It is significant to you, then?" Thomas asked, uneasily, with a faint smile.

"Oh, certainly not," returned John Lamm, sarcastically. "It doesn't mean anything! But don't delay. How did Marion act? What did she have to say for herself?"

The detective, instead of resuming his seat, began to walk about the room with his hands behind him.

"She hadn't anything to say for herself," returned Thomas. "That's just the trouble. She acted queer—queerer than Stella had ever seen her act in her life."

"How queer?"

"As the girl expresses it, she seemed like a person walking in her sleep. She spoke to Stella, but in a mechanical way, as if her mind were quite elsewhere all the time. They went back to the depot and rode out to Swampscott together."

"Do you mean to say that Marion expressed no surprise when she saw Stella in the street?"

"Momentarily she seemed aroused, but as soon as Stella began to account for herself she relaxed into her 'frozen' condition again."

"What a woman she is!"

"She was not strong enough to conceal from her sister that something terrible had happened. She was so dazed and unnatural that the young girl was frantic with apprehension."

"Of course this places it beyond a doubt that Marion had either killed her legal father or had seen him killed."

"But, my dear Lamm, I can't entertain the first idea for a minute. What possible motive could there be for her?"

"It is to be determined simply by the than death when she came in; but if you know my mother you can imagine the reception she got. Five minutes' explanation to my mother was sufficient. She opened her arms to the fugitive, and Stella North has been under her charge ever since."

"Ah! and you, of course, got the whole story from the girl?"

"That night. There is no question about her frankness or her honesty. If you could talk with her ten minutes you would be assured of that."

"Undoubtedly. And now for the facts. What are they?"

"Well, Lamm," said Thomas, "there are two sets of facts—the immediate and the remote. Whether the remote have any relation to the immediate I cannot tell. Nevertheless, you shall hear them first. To go back to Richard Petridge—"

"Of course," said Lamm. "Everything in the case seems to have a peculiar trick of going back to him."

"Still, I am unable to say that he has any connection with this murder, Lamm. It's a mystery, old man, as you will soon see. Stella merely corroborated the facts that I have told you already about Petridge's connection with the family. It was just as I said; he was in love with Marion, but how far they went, whether they were actually engaged or not, nobody knows; not even Stella, for the fact comes out that Marion is a very peculiar woman."

"Peculiar? Do you mean eccentric?"

"Well, eccentric, perhaps," said Thomas, doubtfully. "What I mean is that she is exceedingly self-willed and self-reliant; that she is naturally secretive, dislikes to make confidants, repels intercourse on topics near to her, dislikes to be sympathized with, and is extremely sensitive about little things that ordinary people would pass unobserved. Exaggerate all these qualities to an unusual degree, and you have the traits that make Marion Stackhouse peculiar. If you call such a character eccentric, she's eccentric. If you mean, however, the eccentricity that is allied to monomania or insanity, I fail to find that she has ever exhibited any traces of it. I questioned Stella very particularly on this point—as to whether her sister was in the habit of taking queer freaks. She says it might seem so to anybody who was not familiar with her peculiar temperament, but she never knew her to do anything without the possibility of a reason therefor."

"Wasn't this a marriage from pique, then, such as we occasionally hear of?"

"So I fancy, Lamm. Stella will not express her opinion to that effect, but I can see that she thinks so. Well, now, as to Petridge coming back into the family again since his return from Australia, it was just as we surmised, ostensibly to pay Stella some attentions; but the girl declares that he never spoke of love to her, though he had plenty of opportunity."

"Which indicates," said Lamm, quietly, "that Petridge still came to see Marion, despite her marriage to Stackhouse."

"So it would seem; and that she regretted her hasty step in marrying too soon. Well, but this is only speculation. To go on with the facts: Petridge's attentions to Stella were thoughtlessly received—the girl insists she has no other feeling for him than that of a pleasant acquaintance—but after his departure on his recent business trip, the purpose of which we can't determine, it came to her ears that there was a great deal of gossip about their association. She determined to be more careful in the future. The day before the murder, Petridge reappeared at the house. It would seem that the instant he got home he came to the North household. He began to lay out plans at once to go hither and yon with the girl. But the poor thing's suspicions were aroused by her long mouth of refection. She determined not to be made a cat's paw for any purpose, and at the first opportunity—having summoned up the necessary courage—she broached the tabooed subject to her sister."

"What time of day was this?"

"It seems to have been about the middle of the afternoon. Marion was not feeling very well. She was lying down, and Stella was sitting beside her with a fan. Marion introduced Petridge's name herself, making some inquiries about his visit of the previous evening. Then Stella made so bold as to ask her advice, and finally told what her suspicions were."

"But you don't mean—"

"Simply that Petridge pretended to pay attentions to her (Stella) for the sake of appearances, and that his real object was to be near Marion."

"When? Knowing the woman, I can imagine the result."

"Basil. But Stella was innocent enough. She merely intended to give her sister a well-meant warning. Marion received it as an insult. 'It is a jealous lie,' she cries into the ears of the astonished Stella. 'Richard Petridge never meant to marry me; never cared a feather for me. If you had asked me I could have told you so. But since you thought it better to play the spy on me, why, I'll prove it to fact of whether the girl was alone in the house that night.'"

"Ah, precisely. That is what I am working to find out. Well, Lamm, on the whole journey home, Marion Stackhouse had but two sentences to utter, which seem to have any bearing upon the case. The first was when Stella made some mention of Stackhouse. 'Never speak to me of that man again,' said Marion, fiercely. 'He is not my husband. And again, just before they got to the house, seizing her sister's wrist, Stella, she whispered, 'do you want to see me in my grave? Then never tell a living soul where I have been.'"

"Thunder and guns!" ejaculated Lamm. "That woman is the princess of mysteries. Doesn't it strike you a little peculiar that she should continue to assert that Stackhouse is not her husband? Mind you, she always puts it in that way. I have heard her say it myself. 'He is not my husband.' Now why shouldn't she say, 'I refuse to live with this man any longer, not forever, 'He is not my husband.' Wasn't the marriage public?"

"To be sure it was. The marriage occurred in St. Paul's church, in the presence of hundreds of people."

Lamm came and placed his hand softly on the reporter's shoulder.

"You don't imagine, Thomas," he questioned below his breath, "that she had been secretly married to this man Petridge previous to his departure for Australia?"

"What an idea!" cried Thomas, amused. "You seem anxious to give her a monomania on the marriage question. If married already to Petridge what earthly reason could induce her to marry Stackhouse? It seems to me that you have got a complication there not likely to arise in any well-regulated family."

"Perhaps. But I've gone far enough in this case to know that there is something different behind it than anything I ever met with in all my life before. But to go on. Of course Stella is frightened to death by Marion's reference to the grave, and refrained from telling anybody where she had seen her, until you got out of her."

"So you might know by the way things have gone on. She was scared enough that night, you may be sure, but the next day when the news came of the murder you can imagine the effect. There seems to have been a great scene between the sisters. Stella came out horrified at Marion's calmness. Marion would tell her absolutely nothing except these enigmatical sentences as these: 'I am not responsible. The act is out of my hands. Justice will overtake the guilty. Let me alone. If you betray me I shall kill myself. You are not to believe me capable for any cause of killing a man who has taken the place of my own father. I loved Father North, as well as you did. I could not have harmed him if I had hated him—all of which was scarcely calculated, as you perceive, to allay her apprehensions. It was not, however, till the young girl discovered that her sister was sleeping with her father's pistol under her pillow that she quite lost her head, and believed that Marion was really guilty.'"

"What! The weapon that killed Paul North?" asked the detective, almost helpless with amazement.

"Presumably, since she must have brought it with her from the Marlboro street house the night of the murder, and one of its barrels had been recently discharged."

BANKER BEGINS TERM IN PRISON

Frank G. Bigelow of Milwaukee Now a Convict in Fort Leavenworth.

PLEADS GUILTY TO CHARGES

Judge Joseph V. Quarles Passes Sentence of Ten Years at Hard Labor in Penitentiary on Self-Confessed Defaulter.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 12.—Ten years' imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth was the sentence imposed on Frank G. Bigelow, self-confessed defaulter of the funds of the First National bank to the amount of $1,500,000, who pleaded guilty Saturday on an indictment of the federal grand jury containing ten counts, each a violation of the national banking laws. Mr. Bigelow was arraigned before Judge Joseph V. Quarles of the United States district court.

Taken to Leavenworth.

Leavenworth, Kan., June 12.—Frank G. Bigelow is now convict No. 4717 in the Fort Leavenworth penitentiary. The former Milwaukee banker reached here at 7:40 o'clock Saturday night in charge of Andrew Johnson and Charles Kelly, deputy marshals, and was accompanied by Gordon Bigelow, his son, and Dr. Bigelow of Chicago a brother.

Bigelow bore up fairly well during the trip, except at Moline, Ill., where the deputy marshals say he broke down and wept. At another point Gordon broke down, and the marshal informed him he was having a bad effect on his father.

Cheers Counterfeiter.

Bigelow seemed anxious to avoid the gaze of church people and reporters. He wore an old slouch hat, and was not nearly as neatly dressed as the counterfeiter who was brought with him. In making railroad connections union depots were avoided.

On making the turn in the walk on the Riverside drive at Fort Leavenworth, when the penitentiary loomed up in front of the party, the counterfeiter showed a disposition to weaken. When he trembled Bigelow spoke words of encouragement to him. Bigelow, it seems was not in jail at any time since his defection was discovered, and when the keys were turned on him after passing into the penitentiary he remarked it was the first time he had ever been in prison.

Begins Term as Convict.

Warden McClaughry remained up stairs in his office. Deputy Lemon was at the second or inner gate and the prisoner was told to step into the deputy's office. Bigelow gave his name as Frank G. Bigelow and age 55. He was searched and some plain jewelry and a small sum of money were taken away from him. He asked no questions, and was assigned to a regular cell to spend the night. Monday morning Bigelow was given a middle grade prison suit, when Bertillon measurements and front and side view pictures were taken.

With no allowances for good time, he will be released in six years and four months. It is said his wife will visit him soon. The son seemed annoyed and expressed his disgust when some army officers came to the Sally port to get a view of his father.

The brother and son of Bigelow remained down stairs and watched through the grating until they saw him escorted into a cell-house. They then sought an interview with Warden McClaughry and conversed with him privately.

May Be Prison Clerk.

It is said that they requested that Bigelow be assigned to light work. This will not be determined until after the prison physician examines Bigelow and reports on his condition and Warden McClaughry has a talk with him. There is a demand for prison clerks, and Bigelow may have a position of this kind.

There are five national bank prisoners in the penitentiary, and four of these are clerks, and one answers the telephone in the chief clerk's office. These bankers manifested considerable interest in Bigelow. One of them Broderick, from Elkhart, Ind., was a member of the National Bankers' association while Bigelow was president.

In only a few instances have there been older prisoners brought here. If his health is not good he may after a few weeks be assigned to Captain Carter's old position of prison hospital clerk. At first he will be thrown in contact with negro, Indian and all kinds of prisoners.

OLDEST PRINTER PASSES AWAY

John H. Eagle Dies at Home of His Granddaughter.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 12.—John H. Eagle, aged 90 years, who, it is thought, was the oldest printer in the United States, died at the home of his granddaughter in this city. On account of his luxuriant growth of flowing gray hair, several artists and photographers have won national prizes with pictures for which he posed. He was born in Philadelphia in 1815.

Big Paper Plant Burns.

Ashtland, Wis., June 12.—The plant of the Ashtland Sulphite Fiber company was destroyed by fire. The loss is $50,000, insured for $20,000. It was the only institution of the kind in northern Wisconsin.

Friday night a large icehouse at Brown's lake, belonging to the Lincoln Ice company of Chicago, was struck by lightning and completely destroyed. The loss is $40,000, insured for $25,000.

Home Health Club

SCARLATINA.

There have been many requests brought to my desk in the last week or so, for instructions for treating scarlatina. I presume from the description of the cases for which instructions were desired, that the authors of these letters of inquiry, as do most of the laity, have the impression that scarlatina bears much the same relation to scarlet fever that varioloid does to smallpox, that is, a slight attack. This is erroneous, however, as scarlatina and scarlet fever are synonymous terms, scarlatina merely being the technical term for scarlet fever.

It seems that most of those who are now asking for instructions desire to know particularly about the proper diet for scarlatina. I will, therefore, give further instructions upon the subject, including directions for this part of the treatment in detail.

Let us see what the disease is, and its characteristics, and then the reason for adopting the dietical rules, which I shall give, will be better understood.

Scarlatina is an acute, contagious, infectious disease the duration of which is self-limited: it is characterized by high fever, rapid pulse, scarlet exanthema (eruption)—the complications liable to result being nephritis (inflammation of the kidneys), uraemia (insufficiency of urine), spinal convulsions and epistaxis (nose bleed). During convalescence, desquamation (peeling off) of the skin, and lining of the mouth and throat, occurs. Kidney troubles are more likely to develop, and are more serious, during desquamation. The fever is liable to run up very high, even reaching as high as 104 and 106 degrees Fahrenheit, and the pulse beats running as high as 110 and 120 per minute.

When this condition exists it will be necessary to restrict the diet, exclusively to milk, in some form—malted, koumis or peptonized. If there is inflammation of the kidneys, the milk diet should be continued for several weeks, and some authorities claim that scarlatinal nephritis is averted by persisting in this milk diet from the beginning, and continuing for several weeks. When this regime is maintained it is necessary to give about four ounces of the fluid every hour.

During the time the fever is present, which does not, as a rule, exceed but a few days, liquid food should be the only form of nutrition.

There is another thing which must be carefully avoided, and that is the renal passage of albumen or technically, albuminuria. The milk diet is usually all that is required for this, if it is begun early and persisted in. This liquid food can be alternated as follows: Milk, malted milk, koumis, soups, broth, farinaceous gruels, etc. As there is liability to renal irritation during desquamation, very little nitrogenous (containing nitrogen) food should be given, with the exception of milk and malted milk, using large quantities of these liquids, to stimulate uraemia.

As the throat is generally affected, it frequently occurs that there is dryness of the mouth, thirst and difficulty in swallowing. Then the juices of such fruits as oranges (quite sour), lemons, barley water, frappe, etc., should be given in larger quantities.

Even though there has been a light attack, there should be great precaution exercised in the diet of convalescing patients. It often occurs that the appetite is too vigorous. They should not be permitted to overload the stomach, however, shortening the duration of the intervals between meals, instead.

The following may be given as the patient gains in strength:

Milk toast, cream toast, soft-boiled or poached eggs, eggnog without the liquor, small portions of mashed baked potato, sweet oranges, stewed prunes, baked apples with cream, small quantities of dates and figs, using care not to overburden the stomach with too much at a time.

These instructions, if followed in connection with those given in a previous lecture, will be successful in tiding the patient safely over the severest case of scarlatina.

CLUB NOTES.

Eagle Grove.—Dr. David H. Reeder, Laporte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: We have been reading the lectures in this paper for some time, and enjoy them immensely. Some time ago you told how to cure sweating feet. I wish to say that I tried the remedy on our little boy, with splendid results.

There are so many people who take headache powders and tablets, etc., and I wonder if they know that by putting their feet in hot water and keeping the lower extremities warm and the head cool, is almost a sure cure for the worst kind of a headache. I have seen it tried many times, and always with success.

My only trouble is neuralgia in the arms. One doctor told me it was caused from heart trouble; but he offered no suggestions for relief. The pain is worse in the left arm, and some times the middle fingers of either hand cramps. The pain is mostly in the elbows on the inside of the arm and just where the arm joins the body a little forward of the arm pit. I will be very thankful if you can tell me what to do.—Rec. No. 10450.

I thank you for your interest in my work, and also for the suggestions which you have made for the benefit of others. If the pains in your arms and joints come from defective circulation, the difficulty could be overcome by the use of an old German doctor by the name of Schuessler. These elements cannot harm you in any possible way, and I believe they would prove very beneficial. The kind you require is Ferrum Phos. and Mag. Phos. for neuralgia and defective circulation.

Centerville.—Dr. David H. Reeder.

Laporte, Ind.—Dear Sir: Will you please have the same treatment that Mrs. L.—has been using to reduce her weight, that she spoke about in last week's paper, published again soon? I would be very thankful to know of the treatment, as I am gaining flesh too fast. It is a burden to me. I read the Home Health club articles the first thing when I get the paper. Will you please give a lecture on apoplexy and the cause and how to prevent it? Respectfully,—Mrs. A. M.

I think the reduction of your weight could be very safely, practically and hygienically accomplished by the Home Health club method referred to which is given in the Club Books. I do not have time to reply to all letters making inquiry such as yours, by giving full directions in the letter, but simply refer them to the Club Lectures, which contains the instructions in their entirety.

All readers of this paper are at liberty to write for information on subjects pertaining to health. All communications should be addressed to Dr. David H. Reeder, Laporte, Ind., and must contain name and address in full and at least four cents in postage.

FRENCH ABSINTHE TOPERS

National Evil Growing to Such an Extent Authorities Are at Their Wits' End.

There are 5,000 quarts of absinthe swallowed by the citizens of Paris every day in the year, and the national evil is growing to such an extent that the authorities are at their wits' end as to how to battle with the problem. The manufacturing of the deadly liquor is such a profitable and respectable industry in France that any legislation against it is out of the question. The interests that control the manufacture of the drink openly control the situation politically, and in the face of the facts the people are powerless. The population is fast becoming depleted, the moral standard of the country has degenerated to an alarming extent, and crime and insidious evils of every character have reached an amazing stage. The cunning and the desire for the expression of the vindictive spirit, characteristics that follow the drinking of the green liquid as night follows day, are fast becoming an integral part of the French character of the middle class, and the note of warning, though sounded often now, seems to fall on deafened ears.

There comes an hour in the Parisian's day when he has no need to consult his watch to learn the time, and that is the so-called "heure d'absinthe," between five and six in the afternoon. If he is summed, a warm, half-slosh, half-slosh odor, not unlike paragonic, is wafted to his nostrils or floats insidiously in the air.

One-fifth of the population of the city drinking a liquor that is universally condemned by the entire medical world. This seems a large statement, but it must be remembered that while some take no drink at all, many take a single drink, and more two or three.

The figures given by the ministry of finance show that a little under 5,000 quarts of absinthe are consumed a day in the city of Paris alone, and that the proportion is almost as much in the provinces. It is estimated that in France every day 5,000,000 of population drinks daily 10,000 quarts of the liquid. It should be remembered also that there are many drinks in a quart bottle.

INDUSTRIES FOR WOMEN.

Progress of Education and Growth of Christianity Doing Much in India.

How to improve the condition of its women is one of the greatest problems which faces India. That their lot has been a hard one; that they have not been given a fair chance in life; that the natives of India can never rise to a high position among the nations until their women have been elevated, is being more and more commonly admitted, says the Southern Workman.

With the progress of education and the growth of the Christian community, Indian women are slowly coming to understand that many spheres of activity and usefulness which hitherto have been closed to them are as appropriate for them as for their husbands and brothers. For the present the Christian community must lead in all these movements. The Marathi mission of the American board, working in the Bombay presidency, has now fairly developed several industries for girls. The most important are weaving with hand looms, rug-making, lace embroidery, and art needlework. The objections to the first and second of these are that the profits are small, and that they require machinery and equipments which prevent their being developed except in factories. In India, much more than in the United States, factories are unsafe places for girls. The third and fourth industries are most appropriate for Indian young women. They can be developed in private homes or anywhere else; they require only a small and inexpensive outfit they offer large scope for skill, intelligence and taste, and also bring fair profits.

TEAM OWNERS ARE SATISFIED

Vote Against Proposition to Do Business With Non-Union Workmen.

WILL NOT LOCK OUT DRIVERS

Men Who Control a Majority of the Hauling Traffic in the City Decide to Retain Their Present Employees.

Chicago, June 12.—Fears that the teamsters' strike might spread to the team owners who control the trucking industry were allayed yesterday when the result of a referendum vote taken by the Chicago Team Owners' association was announced.

The vote was taken by mail and the returns show that but three members voted in favor of forcing deliveries to boycotted houses, while 175 voted against it.

The proposition submitted for a vote read: "Does the present strike interfere seriously enough with your business to cause you to operate with non-union drivers or close up your barns?"

Secretary T. J. Cavanagh of the Team Owners' association said that the vote set at rest any doubt about the attitude of the team owners. A special meeting of the association will be held in the Great Northern hotel to-night, at which the result of the vote will be announced.

Would Force Deliveries.

Col. W. P. Read, who has been pronounced in favor of forcing the issue with the teamsters, said yesterday that he would abide by the will of the majority, although he said he would attend the meeting to-night and do all he could to have deliveries made to all houses giving orders.

"In view of the action taken by the association, I do not see that I can do anything further in the matter," said Col. Read. "My teaming business is small compared with my coal interests. I was virtually forced into this matter through being appointed on a committee when I was absent from the meeting."

This morning the annual convention of the Team Owners' Association of America opened at the Great Northern hotel and it will occupy the attention of the local team owners for the next four days. About 110 delegates, from all parts of the country, are here, but the "local strike" will not be officially discussed at the gathering.

No Overtures for Peace.

John V. Farwell, chairman of the action committee of the Employers' association, through whom negotiations for peace must be opened, said that no new overtures had been made, and he did not know that any were contemplated by the strike leaders.

Interest among the teamsters was diverted from the strike yesterday and centered on the election of delegates to the annual convention, which opens in Philadelphia, Aug. 7. Among the unions which have thus far elected delegates the Shea faction and the anti-Shea faction seem to be breaking about even. Yesterday the Brick, Sand and Terra Cotta Teamsters' union elected four delegates and left them uninstructed, which means they are opposed to Shea. The Van Teamsters' union elected three on the same basis.

Shea Gains Votes.

On the other hand, the coal teamsters and the express and delivery drivers instructed for Shea. The truck drivers and the ice drivers nominated delegates yesterday and will elect at the next meeting. The truck drivers are expected to endorse Shea and the ice wagon drivers will probably be against him. The commission wagon drivers have elected delegates opposed to Shea and the milk wagon drivers have instructed for him.

Out side of Chicago, it is said that Shea will have little support, but the slate makers admit that there may be some radical changes before the convention. On the Shea slate, Thomas L. Hughes of the Lime and Cement Teamsters' union is the candidate for secretary-treasurer, in opposition to E. L. Turley, who seeks re-election. Hughes is now in the East, ostensibly collecting funds for the strike, but incidentally trying to build up his fences. The East, however, is said to be for Turley, and for Edward Gould of New York for president, to succeed Shea.

Employers Seem Satisfied.

The employers had few wagons on the streets yesterday. With the exception of a few coal wagons, the express companies were the only ones to operate. Victor W. Sincere of the Employers' Teaming company said that matters were progressing so smoothly that but for the policemen and armed guards the merchants would hardly realize that they had a strike on their hands.

He said the department stores were now doing 85 per cent of their normal business, and that Montgomery Ward & Co., against whom the strike was originally called, was doing more business now than at the corresponding period last year.
